

NETTERS FOUND FISHING GOOD

FLEET BROUGHT IN NEARLY 20,000 POUNDS UP TO NOON TODAY.

Mackerel netters found fishing good last night again, and at noon today the boats have landed about 20,000 pounds at the various wharves along the water front. The fares ran from 100 pounds up to high line fare of 2600 pounds landed by the Aeolus. Other receipts today included the off-shore draggers Herbert Parker and Grace and Evelyn, both arriving for the General Seafoods Corporation. Gill net landings were good yesterday afternoon but the bulk of the fish, mostly pollock, went to the splitters.

Counting 257,546 Salmon.

On July 8, 1929, eight men of Naknek, Alaska, counted 257,546 salmon—not sheep—passing through the underwater gates placed by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries on the Naknek river. The law requires that at least 50 per cent of the salmon swimming to the spawning shallows of Alaskan rivers shall escape the nets and traps of the salmon canneries. Only by counting the fish taken by the canneries and by counting the fish that swim up a river, can Bureau agents guarantee freedom to every other salmon.

So fences with gates are placed across the chief salmon rivers of Alaska. Canvas painted white is stretched on the river bottom at each gate and Bureau representatives with enumerating machines take their posts counting the salmon as they shoot through all the long northern summer day.

Eight men of Naknek, Alaska, set up the new record this past summer, according to the true fish story reported to the National Geographic Society by Commissioner Henry O'Malley of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, when they counted 257,546 salmon in one day, which is 32,130 per man, which is 1787 per man per hour for 18 hours which is 29 salmon per man per minute.

SUPPLY HOLDS UP AT BOSTON

RECEIPTS OF OVER 700,000 POUNDS AGAIN AT PIER THIS MORNING.

Twenty vessels furnished the supply at the Boston fish pier, all groundfish and flatfish. Fares aggregated 630,000 pounds of ground fish and 75,000 pounds of mixed fish. A small lot of 200 pounds of mackerel was brought in by the sch. Mystic.

Market was still strong with haddock at $5; large cod, $5 and markets, $3 to $3.50.

N. S. Pickled Fish.

The market for No. 1 large grocery herrings has apparently steadied itself at about $5.50 to $5.75 per barrel ex boat, says the Maritime Merchant. Stocks on hand are somewhat larger than a year ago and a fair quantity is still reported held by the fishermen. Later September caught herrings have been slowly drifting into the market and fetching $5 to $5.25 ex boat. Export demand for herrings the past month has been only fair.

Spring mackerel are unchanged. Several fairly large lots have recently arrived from the Magdalen Islands. Prices are steady at $8.25 to $8.50 ex boat. Export demand has been reported rather quiet of late. Very few fat mackerel have been taken to date.

The export demand for alewives shows a slight improvement over a year ago, but is still far from normal. The present value is $5.75 ex boat.

FAIR RECEIPTS THIS MORNING

NETTERS STILL LANDING FAIRLY GOOD CATCHES IN PORT HERE.

The local market received a fair supply of fresh fish this morning, there being quite a number of the netters drifting back home with good sized fares, and some off-shore fish for filleting. The mackerel found a waiting market and shipments to outside were made as fast as the boats could discharge. On account of the weather, it is doubtful if any of the boats go out tonight.

FEW ARRIVALS FOR WEEK-END

SIXTEEN CRAFT OF ALL KINDS
AT FISH PIER THIS MORNING.

Sixteen craft were reported at the fish pier this morning when the bell rang, making it a quiet week-end, considering that Monday is a holiday and the pier closed tomorrow. Two of the arrivals were beam trawlers and the rest were shore fishermen and haddockers arriving home for the holiday. Prices remained good, haddock selling for $5, and large cod for the same figure. Mackerel, of which there were no arrivals, except what came overland, were quoted at 16 cents a pound.

N. F. Codfish News.

The price of certain qualities of shore fish is said to have advanced to $10.00 per quintal. At this figure the short catch has sustained a high value and exporters are finding a difficulty to obtain their supplies needed to fill requirements. Whilst the cheaper Icelandic and Norwegian fish is supplied to markets that consume our codfish, Newfoundland shore cure can always command a proportionally higher value. There is a danger line of their favorite cure and are willing to pay high prices to obtain them. It is difficult to understand why the preference for certain cures should be, yet they are established facts in the world's consumption of fish. At the rate Newfoundland fish is being marketed there will not be a large carry over into the New Year. It may be well for exporters to keep markets active with just sufficient supplies. Through this adjustment of exports higher values will probably rule later on in the season.—St. John's Trade Review.
